ATLANTA'S WELCOME

To the President of the United States.

A RECEPTION WORTHY THE OFFICE.

The People Turn Out in Large Numbers

TO SHAKE THE PRESIDENT'S HAND.

The Ride from Chattanooga to Atlanta

THE ARRIVAL AND THE DRIVE

The Receptions at the Capitol and the Mansion.

THE DAY IN DETAIL.

The president of the United States was the guest of Atlanta yesterday.

President Harrison and his party spent a few hours of the early morning in Chattanooga where they were given a hearty welcome. Then under the escort of General Passenger Agent Harman and Superintendent McCallum, of the Western and Atlantic railroad, came down the "historic Western and Atlantic" through the battle grounds which the president and other members of his party, remembered so vividly.

President Harrison took part in the campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and figured prominently at Besaca and in the battles about the city of Atlanta. It was with the keenest interest, therefore, that he viewed from the spacious windows of his observation car the different points along the line.

The Atlanta party, headed by Mayor Hemphill, met him at Marietta. At the Chattahoochee the Atlanta Artillery squad began its salute to the chief executive of this great nation.

On to Atlanta the scenes were those calling to mind the former visits of the great men in whose honor the city turned out. A crowd greeted the distinguished party at the depot. Then came the drive to the battlefield of Peachtree creek, where General Harrison won his star. After that a reception to the public at the capitol, a visit to the night school, then came the reception tendered the party by the governor at the mansion. Atlanta's welcome to the president of the United States was one befitting his high office.

CHATTANOOGA TO ATLANTA.

The Ride of the Party Through Upper Georgia.

The presidential party left Chattanooga this morning a few minutes before 12 o'clock. Charles Harman, the general passenger agent of the Western and Atlantic, was in charge of the party. He had Ish Dunn for conductor and Bill Hackney for engineer—a winning hand.

The start from Chattanooga was a royal send off to the party. The day was cloudless and the sun shone brightly. The general Harrison had an opportunity to survey the country and again look over the battlefields on which he struggled.

At the various places he pointed out to those around him the points of interest in the 50's. Mr. Harman made the trip doubly interesting by his description of the many important points along the route. He pointed out the battlefields of Chickamauga, Tunnel Hill, Resaca, Dug Gap, Kennesaw and Peachtree Creek. Short stops were made at each of these places, and the president shook hands with a large number of people.

It was at Resaca that General Harrison led the charge against the confederate battery, in which he lost nearly half of his regiment. Marshall Randall, who accompanies the president on this trip, lost his arm in that engagement. He was a non-commissioned officer in the president's regiment.

Among other places visited were Ringgold, Dalton and Cartersville. A heavy shower prevailed while the train was at the latter place, but it had no effect on the enthusiasm of the crowd. Brief speeches were made from the rear platform of the train by the president and Postmaster General Wanamaker. The president spoke as follows:

"My friends: I am very much obliged to you for coming here to see me. I feel that I am reciprocating your good feelings. I have had great pleasure today in passing over some parts of the old route that I took once before under very different and distressing circumstances to find how easy it is, when we are all agreed, to travel between Chattanooga and Atlanta. I am glad to see the evidence of prosperity that abounds through your country, and wish you in all your relations every human good. (Cheers)."

Shortly after leaving Chattanooga the president was informed of the death of Mr. Halford, wife of his private secretary. He was shocked at the news and immediately sent a telegram of condolence to Mr. Halford. In it he said that if he could follow the full desires of his heart he would turn back to Washington so as to be with him in his hour of sorrow, but he felt that he (Halford) would advise him to continue his trip in view of preparations made for, and the great disappointment that would result from its abandonment. He had therefore decided to continue it according to plans already made.

The Atlanta Delegation. The Atlanta delegation to receive the president met yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce building. The full committee was present and Mayor Hemphill called the body to order. The final details for the president's reception were perfected and the meeting adjourned.

At 1 o'clock the Western and Atlantic railroad had a special car sidetracked near the Markham house for the committee going up the road, and as the regular train took it on the car was full. In it were:

Mayor Hemphill; Aldermen Middlebrooks, Hutchinson, Woodward, Rice, Shropshire; Councilmen McBride, Sawtell, Hendrix, Murphy, Lambert, Turner, King, Holbrook. From the citizens were Hon. R. B. Bullock, General J. R. Lewis, Captain John Milledge, Mr. Julius L. Brown, Mr. S. M. Inman, Hon. J. T. Glenn and Hon. W. L. Calhoun.

The train made its run to Marietta, leaving Atlanta at 1:30 o'clock on schedule time. At Marietta the car was thrown upon a sidetrack.

On the way up the gentlemen composing the committee mingled and conversed. Everything was talked of, and the cigars supplied by the mayor were smoked.

The special car remained on the sidetrack at Marietta for ten or fifteen minutes.

The depot platform, the hotel verandas and the sidewalks were thronged with people.

The special main came in on time, and as it passed Mayor Hemphill's car President Harrison came to the rear platform, and, raising his hat, bowed. Near the old Kennesaw house the presidential train stopped, and the mayor's car was thrown in front.

Then the train pulled out toward Atlanta. Mayor Hemphill requested Governor Bullock to visit the president's car and ascertain his wishes. The governor made his way through the long train as it rolled and rocked around the curves of the Western and Atlantic. President Harrison greeted the ex-governor with evident pleasure, and asked that the mayor of Atlanta and his party be presented at once.

Mayor Hemphill then conducted the Atlanta delegation to the observation car, where the president and his party were. Mayor Hemphill was presented, and as the president extended his right hand most cordially, he laid his left upon the mayor's shoulder.

The greeting was most cordial between the two who have faced each other on the battlefields.

Mayor Hemphill then introduced those with him, and the president grasped them by the hand, repeating each name.

One by one the Atlantians were introduced to members of the party.

As the train struck the Chattahoochee bridge the Atlanta Artillery fired its first salute. Then, just in front of the presidential train, the artillery train moved. Every three minutes a gun was fired. Every discharge could be easily heard on the train.

At Van Winkle's the whistles began blowing, and from that point to the union depot the noise was deafening. Every position from which an observation was secured was occupied.

Tops of box cars, flat cars, roofs of buildings—all were occupied.

The broad street bridge was packed.

Whitehall and Wall streets were lined.

THE PRESIDENT IN ATLANTA.

The Arrival of the Party and the Drive Through the City.

The train stopped under the depot. Here Governor Norther, Mr. Chamberlin, Mr. Kontz, Mr. Johnson, Colonel Chapman and other members of the reception committee advanced to receive the party. The governor, on being presented to the president, said: "I am glad to welcome your excellency to the state of Georgia. You will find among us a loyal and hospitable people, and in their name I welcome you to the state."

Replying, the president said it gave him great pleasure to visit the Empire State of the South, the wonderful evidences of the prosperity of which were manifest in the stirring city of Atlanta.

The party disembarked. The president came out leaning on the arm of Mayor Hemphill. Then the other members of the party came.

The visitors were led through it to the carriages awaiting them and then the drive began. The party consists of President and Mrs. Harrison, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Secretary of Agriculture Rusk, United States Marshal Carter Harrison and his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mrs. Dimmick, Marshall Randall, Major Sanger, of the army; Mr. George W. Boyd, of the Pennsylvania road, in charge of the train, and Mrs. Boyd; Mr. A. J. Clark, of the Associated Press; Mr. Richard Oulahan, of the United Press; Mr. O. P. Austin, of the Press News Association; Mrs. Harrison and several members of the party remained in the car. Mr. James L. Taylor, of the Richmond and Danville, and Mr. S. H. Hardwick, of the Georgia Pacific.

The carriages moved off—the first carriage containing President and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Governor Norther and Mayor Hemphill. A gentleman, apparently from the country, approached and, taking from a paper two oranges, presented them to the president and Mrs. Russell Harrison. Both extended their hands and with a smile thanked the generous donor, who received a hearty cheer from the crowd for his liberality.

The second carriage contained Postmaster General Wanamaker, General Lewis, Judge Newman and Mrs. Dimmick. The third, Secretary of Agriculture Rusk, Alderman Turner and Alderman Middlebrooks.

The fourth, Mrs. McKee, Mr. Russell Harrison, ex-Mayor John F. Glenn and Mr. Frank P. Rice.

The fifth, Capt. George W. Boyd, Mr. Julius Brown, Mr. James A. Taylor and Councilman Hendrix.

The sixth, Major Sanger, Major M. C. Kiser and Judge W. L. Calhoun.

In the seventh were Mrs. G. W. Boyd, Marshall Randall and Mr. E. O. Tibbitt.

In the others were members of the general council, government officials, prominent citizens and visiting representatives of the press.

From the depot the party drove up Pryor street to Desatur, then into Peachtree, and on out Peachtree as far as Wilson avenue. The president and other members of his party were much struck with the handsome residences they saw on every side, and many were the compliments to the evidences of thrift and energy which lined the driveway.

At Wilson avenue the procession turned off towards the driving club, and then on past a point overlooking the valley in which the Richmond and Danville railroad lies. The president had inquired for an old mill which he remembered during the fighting in those hot days of July, 1864, and it was to find this point that the party drove to that particular point.

Here the president alighted, and, escorted by Mayor Hemphill, Captain Hendrix and Hon. Frank Rice, did a little tramping through the woods.

For probably a quarter of a mile they walked along, viewing from points of vantage the hillsides and valleys which, when Mr. Harrison last saw them, were lined with gray and blue. The old mill was found—but it proved to be the wrong mill.

After some discussion on the lay of the land, as he remembered it, it was determined that the Collier mill was the one to which he had reference.

"It is nearer to Peachtree creek than this I know," said Mr. Harrison. "I remember it perfectly. There were large stones by it. On one of these, I remember, my adjutant rolled himself up in a blanket and slept all night. No, this is not the place, but I seem to remember these hills. I've no doubt in my mind the skirmishing I went over this very ground."

It was too late by this time to think of a visit to Collier mill, so the president gave the word and the party started back toward the city. They came this way by way of the Boulevard. The new homes out that way attracted attention. There were a number of scenes of interest to the northerners in the party, especially through Wheat street, where the "brother in black" was out in force.

Two little negro urchins ran beside the president's carriage from the time he left the depot until he got back.

"Who are you?" asked one of the newspaper men. "Where do you belong?" addressing one of these boys.

"I belong to Atlanta, and I come out here to see the president."

"President of what?" asked the questioner. "Why, don't you know? President of Georgia, of course!" and the boy grimaced scorn at the ignorance of the northerner.

The Supper at the Kimball.

Arrived at the hotel, the party took rooms assigned to them and prepared for tea.

President and Mrs. Harrison were in room 107—the bridal chamber. This is the same room which President and Mrs. Cleveland occupied on their visit to Atlanta.

Later the following simple yet elegant menu was served in a private dining hall at the Kimball house.

Consomme a la Trappe.

Broiled Spanish Mackerel.

Potatoes a la Bretonne.

Tenderloin Beef aux Champignons.

Asparagus.

Tomatoes en Mayonnaise.

Spring Chicken Sur Toast.

French Peas.

Strawberries.

Cake.

Ice Cream.

Requorfort Cheese.

Bent Cracker.

Cafe Noir.

It's a rather inauspicious fact that just thirteen days ago to this date, the president, accompanied by the gentleman of the party, and escorted by members of the reception committee, was driven to the capitol.

RECEPTION AT THE CAPITOL.

About 3,500 People Shake Hands with the President.

At the rate of fifty a minute, about 3,500 people shook hands with President Harrison last evening at the capitol.

The president and his party were about half an hour late, and before he arrived about 2,000 people were crowded about the Washington street entrance.

Inside the capitol awaiting him were: Governor Norther, Chief Justice Blackley, Judge Simpson, Judge Lumpkin, General Phil Cook, Comptroller General Wright, School Commissioner Bradwell, Captain John Milledge, Judge Van Epps, Colonel A. J. Mc Bride, Captain Frank T. Ryan, Mr. E. A. Angier, Superintendent Slaton, Collector Walter Johnson, Dr. J. W. Rankin, Secretary J. P. Edwards, of the Confederate Veterans Association; Mr. Amos Murphy, Captain H. K. Starke, Mr. Mike Doonan, Colonel Mark A. Hardin, Captain "Tip" Harrison, Colonel L. P. Thomas, Mr. W. B. Miles, Colonel A. J. West and Colonel Taylor—the committee on reception.

"It was arranged that the president should stand in the rounds; the crowd coming in from Washington street, filing out on Bunney street. There were to be no introductions, the crowd simply shaking hands with Mr. Harrison as they filed by.

President Harrison was met at the Hunter street entrance by Governor Norther, and he and his party were introduced to the members of the committee. The president, in his private office, and escorted by the governor, followed by Secretary Rusk, Mr. Wanamaker, Mr. Russell Harrison, and the other members of the party, escorted by the reception committee, took his stand facing the Washington street entrance.

The doors swung open, the foremost of the crowd pressed in.

The president was used to it, evidently. He had learned that it was better to take the other man's hand than to wait for the other man to take his.

He shakes just once, very briefly, and is ready for the next one.

He looks at each one with an invariable smile—except for little children and very rarely seemed interested in what he was doing.

His manner had much to do with the clockwork dispatch, for fifty a minute is an extraordinarily good average.

There was no encouragement for a passer-by with a speech—none at all. It was business with him; the sooner he finished, the sooner he would get to his "jewel," added Mr. Wanamaker, shaking hands.

And President Harrison stopped to shake hands with him again, and to thank him and his men.

AT THE NIGHT SCHOOL.

President Harrison Makes a Short Talk to the Boys.

At 9 o'clock President Harrison's carriage drove up to the entrance of the night school. Upon the arms of Mayor Hemphill and Hon. A. J. Clark, with Superintendent Slaton, he entered the schoolroom and was introduced, in a few words, by Mayor Hemphill.

The boys gave the president a standing welcome.

He then addressed them as follows:

"I am glad to be with you tonight. Having but a few minutes to spare, I would offer a few words of encouragement to you. Most, if not all of you are here at night because your circumstances are such that the day must be given to toil; the day is your earning period; the night must, therefore, be set apart for study. I am glad to see that so many find it in your hearts to be here in this school; it is a very hopeful sign; I think that in it the promise that you will each become a useful citizen in this country. Pluck and energy are two essential elements; with them a boy wants to be something. With pluck and energy, success is assured. There is a way of hope after every one of you. If you good cheer, and would offer encouragement to every one of you, and I know you may be useful and honorable citizens in this community, whose officers take the interest to organize this school for your benefit. I very sincerely and earnestly wish you God-speed.

Stick to your studies, don't neglect to acquire a useful education, and you may one day occupy the positions of honor which are held by those today in charge of the affairs of your city.

The boys were then formed in line, and, passing before the principal's desk, each one gave President Harrison a hearty handshake, and each received a cheery word from him. After the pupils' reception, the teachers were each introduced, and then the president bowed himself out, amid rousing cheers. Upon leaving the room, David Davis, the janitor of the school, was given a handshake.

The boys immediately resumed their studies with bright visions, inspired by the words of encouragement which they had just heard, each that one day he too might be president.

AT THE MANSION.

Atlanta Society Pays Its Respects to the President and Party.

One of the most brilliant receptions ever given at the executive mansion was that of last evening, tendered by Governor and Mrs.

courtesy before shaking hands.

"Hold the fort," said one man, "you're right."

"Atlanta university"—another smart young negro.

Jackson McHenry had his numerous family along, and saw that each and all of them shook hands with the president, directing the operation like a general ordering a charge under fire of the enemy.

"Mr. President—you are—president of the whole."

This was a negro politician, and he never recovered entirely from the shock and disappointment sufficiently to finish the sentence.

"Indiana hooser, sir—Richmond—"

"Come from Wisconsin—"

"Ohio, sir—"

All swept on and off, speech or no speech, fifty a minute.

Now and then the crowd would become so confused that a dozen or more would pass without shaking hands with the president; so that Mr. Amos Murphy hit upon the plan of pointing out the president as the crowd passed opposite.

"That's him! Shake hands! Pass on! That's the president! Pass on! Pass on!"

Perhaps one-third of the whole number looked into the president's face while shaking hands, as they would an ordinary new acquaintance. Perhaps another third looked at his hand and at his hands together. Then others looked fixedly at his shoes, or his watch chain, or his knives.

There were some just glad to see him, some honestly curious, some profoundly respectful, some giggling and some impudent.

Colonel Livingston looked at him gloomily, as a doomed man.

Editor Larry Gantt was ecstatically good-humored.

"Good evening, Mr. President," said Colonel John B. Goodwin.

"Glad to see—"

"Howdy, Mr.—"

"President Harris—"

But most of them passed on without any attempt at expressing their emotion in words.

"Humph," said one old darkey as he passed on, "he's white folks. I thought President Harrison was er' publican."

Uncle Zion Bridwell was overwhelmed.

"Sir," he said, holding out to his spectacles with both hands, so that his face flourished awkwardly near the president's nose, "I voted for your grandfather. Sir—"

Then it would go on monotonously for a minute or two—fifty a minute.

"Sir," said one happy old negro, "dis certainly is a treat!"

The president laughed.

He never waited for anybody except little children. Some of them were timid, and he would bend over to shake hands, or wait until the little one could be lifted in his mother's arms.

A little golden-haired youngster in Lord Fauntleroy costume had a bouquet for the president, and dropped it. The president helped the little fellow rescue the flowers, and bowed and smiled his thanks as he shook hands.

But the most amusing little incident of the evening was a stout negro woman who became "happy." Some members of the committee, standing in partial lines, and between these lines the crowd was passing on to the president, one or two abreast.

This darky started with the first in the line. "Glorious goodness," she laughed, shaking hands heartily with a member of the committee. "I see glad."

Then she seized hold of the next man's hand and dragged them forward.

"I knowed it. I knowed it."

She came near throwing herself into the arms of the next one, laughing and crying beside herself with excitement.

She finally reached Mayor Hemphill and the president, shaking hands with both at the same time, her last hand going to Mr. Harrison.

"Bless goodness," she sobbed ecstatically, "bless God! I knowed it. He's come."

The last handshake was at 8:40 o'clock.

The president hurried back to the governor's office for his overcoat and then to his carriage. Five minutes later the capitol was dark, and the crowd all gone.

Captain Couch and the Police.

The crowd at the capitol was handled to perfection.

Captain Couch and his men did themselves proud last night.

"You're worth a dozen," said Russell Harrison to the captain, as the crowd was filing out after the reception.

"You're a jewel," added Mr. Wanamaker, shaking hands.

The President's Views.

President Harrison's reception in Atlanta, as well as at other southern points, was all that could have been desired.

Our chief magistrate, since he crossed the Potomac, has more than ever had the fact brought home to him that this is one country, under one flag, with a common destiny.

In every speech made on southern soil the president has given expression to views that are worthy of his high station, and eminently creditable to him as an American. He frankly testifies that this is a re-united country, with no sectional lines of division, and he says that he goes hence "with a new impulse to public duty, a new inspiration as a citizen of a country whose greatness is only dawning." He is satisfied that the ex-confederates would be among the readiest of our population to defend the old flag, and the loyalty of the south strikes him as something not to be doubted or questioned.

All this is very pleasant, and very just, and it is to be hoped that our distinguished visitor will carry these views home with him. He needs just such opinions and sentiments when he is engaged in his official duties at Washington. He should give them full play, and allow them to harmoniously round into shape the record of his administration.

When the president reflects upon the logical consequences of the views which he has so freely expressed during his stay in the south, he will see that he cannot consistently advocate or endorse any policy that revives the old war issues, divides the sections and oppresses half of the republic in the interests of partisanship in the other half. Believing, as he says, that we should obey the law as the majority shall by their expressions make it, he must feel that the perfect union and the best interests of the states and the people demand laws framed for the common good of all, and inspired by higher and broader motives than the interest of a section, a party or a class.

The president's tour brings him in contact with the people. It enables him to see the situation as it is. Naturally, it is gratifying to him to find millions of people, differing with him in politics, coming forward in the friendly rivalry of hospitality to give him assurance of the honor and esteem in which the president of the republic is held, even in its remotest corners. His greeting in the south has been spontaneous, if not elaborate, and sincere, without the slightest effort to make it a gushing ovation.

It is well that the president and our people should know each other better. Perhaps in the future their mutual understanding will take the shape of results that will strengthen our common patriotism, and advance our common welfare.

The Cincinnati Convention.

The president of the Kansas State Farmers' Alliance is wasting time and labor when he urges the southern alliances to attend the Cincinnati convention with a view to acting with the third, independent party.

He makes an unwise threat when he intimates that, unless the southern branch of the order takes this step, the northern farmers will go back to the republican party.

If the northern alliances will be satisfied with nothing less than a third party, they must go their road alone. If they resent the action of the southern societies in adhering to the democratic party, they may join the republicans if they feel like it.

This convention at Cincinnati is not in the interest of the Farmers' Alliance. It is an invention, a device of the enemy. Its real object is to divide the south.

The trick will fail. In the south the race problem, which is minimized only by the solid white democracy, will prevent a division, whether it takes the shape of the third party movement or some other shape. The alliances of the south know that the only substantial triumph possible for them must be achieved within the ranks of the democracy. They know, too, that the democratic party is pushing forward the reforms they demand as rapidly as it is wise and expedient for a party to do.

But can the northern and western alliances afford to commit suicide by going into a third party movement? Can they overthrow financial oppression, McKinleyism, and monopoly, by joining the party of Mo-

McKinleyism, monopoly and plutocracy? If they answer these questions in the affirmative, they are not true allies.

Our southern farmers will stay away from the Cincinnati convention. Their place is in the front rank of the democratic procession, and they will march with it to assured victory in the campaign of next year. Their false allies and hangers-on may go to the Cincinnati convention, but the great mass of earnest and honest allies will refuse to be led astray.

The Kansas disorganizer made a big mistake when he appealed to the south.

Help on the Good Work.

The movement to finish the building of the Young Men's Christian Association deserves the help and sympathy of every good citizen of Atlanta.

Atlanta has, like every other city, some close-fisted wealthy men who never help any public enterprise, unless they can see a per cent to their wealth. From them we expect nothing, and will not be disappointed.

But Atlanta has a large number of citizens who are able to help and who never fail or refuse. To these we appeal in behalf of this noble charity. About $5,000 is all that is needed to finish this building, making it the best equipped association building outside, possibly, of the larger cities of the north.

Think of what this association has accomplished in the short time it has occupied the new unfinished quarters. It has gathered together hundreds of young men and has thrown around them the best influences. It has been a home for hundreds of young men who came to our city to commence life, fresh from their homes in the country or in other cities, and have introduced them to a life of usefulness and happiness.

Nearly $100,000 has been expended. Only $10,000 is needed to make the splendid building complete, and $6,000 of that sum has been subscribed at one meeting. Let the balance be forthcoming. The property today, owing to the enhanced value of real estate, is worth $160,000. It has contributed as much as any one thing to the enhancement of all our real estate, and the real good it has been to our young men cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

We appeal with confidence to our liberal fellow-citizens to help raise the money asked to finish this building.

Judge Crisp's Record.

The St. Louis Republic, of the 14th, contains a letter from Mr. Henry Jones, of Georgia, protesting against the injustice which Judge Charles F. Crisp is receiving at the hands of that paper. The protest of Mr. Henry Jones takes substantially the shape of the defense of Judge Crisp which has appeared in these columns, but it gives particular emphasis to one phase of the attack on the distinguished Georgian that should not be lost sight of—namely, that the contest for the speakership of the next house must be between democrats who, after it is over, will continue to act together, and for that reason, it ought to be a friendly one. In other words, common sense—to say nothing of party pride—would suggest that a contest between democrats should be entirely free from that spirit of irritation and bitterness which marks the contention between democrats and republicans.

The St. Louis Republic, however, has seen proper to throw all considerations of decency or propriety to the four winds, and, with strange disregard for the interests of its own candidate, has sought to convey the impression that Judge Crisp, if a democrat at all, is a lagging and a reluctant one. It has not hesitated to resort to slander—the most ignominious of all weapons—to cripple Judge Crisp in the race for the speakership.

It has been hinted—at any rate, we have somehow got the impression—that Congressman Mills is the Republic's candidate. If this impression is correct, it is very unfortunate for Mr. Mills that he has such a champion. When it is discovered that the malicious and vindictive assaults on Judge Crisp are the result of an attempt to forward the personal interests of another candidate, a reaction is inevitable. In this instance, the reaction is not likely to help the Republic's candidate, whoever he may be. We do not believe that any candidate for the senate, no matter how anxious for the place he may be, would undertake to endorse either the vicious attacks on Judge Crisp or the motive that hides behind it; nevertheless, the public mind is sure to connect The Republic's candidate with the slanderous effort to question the democracy of Judge Crisp.

The Republic, in commenting on Mr. Henry Jones's letter, and on the review of Judge Crisp's record, made in these columns, insists that the Georgian congressman, in order to prove that he is a genuine democrat, ought to have taken the Mills bill out of the hands of the ways and means committee and monopolized the discussion. The fact that he did not do so is the basis which The Republic has for its charge that he is a reluctant tariff reformer and a lagging democrat. The record of Judge Crisp shows that he permitted the ways and means committee to manage the measure which it had charge of, and that he supported it as ardently as any other democrat.

It is not when the democrats are in the majority in the house that a leader is necessary. The essential qualities of leadership are called for, and are absolutely necessary when the democratic minority is engaged in resisting the aggressive measures of an unscrupulous republican majority. It was in just such a contingency as this, with Thomas B. Reed carrying out his bulldozing methods, that Judge Charles F. Crisp became a prominent figure not only in congress but in the eyes of the public. His ability as a speaker, his knowledge of parliamentary tactics, his coolness and his unflinching courage at once stamped him as the leader of the democratic house. The place and the distinction it carries with it were assigned him by common consent.

No one but a reckless and an unfeeling editor has ever questioned his democracy, and the only effect of the assaults which have been made on him will be the wider advertisement of the splendid record he has made as a consistent and persistent tariff reformer, and as the leader of the democratic minority when Reed was endeavoring to override all parliamentary law.

There Will be No Clash.

The fact that the State Agricultural Society has a world's fair committee, while Governor Northern has called a convention with the same object in view, to meet in Atlanta on the 6th of May, led some to think that there would be a clash between the two bodies.

This is a mistake. There will be no clash, and can be none. The governor's convention will have its work to do, and Colonel Livingston's committee also has its work to do.

It is well that the agricultural society took the step it did in appointing this committee, and it is well that a convention is to be held to consider this momentous question. Both will work to the one end—to have Georgia properly represented at the world's fair; and both should meet with every encouragement in the work they have in hand.

The idea of a clash between the two is nonsense. Governor Northern is not the man to drop the important business in hand to engage in absurd and unprofitable bickering.

Town-Building in the South.

In a recent letter to The Baltimore Mirror, Mr. James R. Randall calls attention to a general way to some mistakes that have been made in the "booming" line.

Mr. Randall is a close observer, and during the past two years has traveled extensively in the south. It is his opinion that in some places people have been "speculating beyond the limits of common sense."

When capital is judiciously invested in a few substantial towns and cities already well established, the results have been and will be very satisfactory. But it will not do to spend too much on the suburbs of cities when their interior improvement is neglected. Some towns seriously deficient in municipal privileges are struggling to find purchasers for property at very high figures, and the result must be a disappointment to somebody.

The speculators are trying to start too many new towns, and millions of dollars are unnecessarily sunk in these ventures. It is said that a Chattanooga banker spent $30,000 on an excursion for New England investors, and lost $28,000 by it.

The fact is, what we need is steady progress, aided in a business-like way. In a region where growing towns are numerous enough there is no sense in starting others, and spending money like water to boom them, unless some special industry connected with their location justifies it.

As a rule southern investors in real estate should stick to the cities and towns already under full headway. There is danger in exterior speculation.

While Mr. Reed is in Italy, he might assume himself by counting out the king and cabinet. If he can count on an American quorum, surely he can count out an Italian.

BARNUM HAD the statue of himself made before he died. This is an interesting fact. People who think they ought to have statues should make the necessary arrangements before it is too late.

MARSHALLS are discussing a law to punish drunkenness. The theory is that such a law would catch the criminal in the act of committing the crime.

THE MACACONARI difficulty should culminate while Mr. Harrison is away, what would Brother Blaine do? Until he could hear from the president, he would be floundering around in the soup with the vermicelli.

A REPUBLICAN editor hopes that John Sherman will write his "recollections." It would be much more interesting if John would write out his anticipations.

THOSE DEMOCRATS who think they can smother the silver issue will persevere a good deal but to little purpose.

"I GUESS," says John Sherman, "that the administration is all right." Then he looked curiously at the reporter and smiled eloquently.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A WRITER in The New York Evening Post urges seriously to write the "Financial History of the Confederate States." He thinks that the story of the confederacy's experiments with paper money would be of inestimable value to the world.

BARNUM was always ready to please the children. Once a little boy wrote to him that he was sick in bed, and would like to see the circus parade. Barnum at once ordered the parade to go four blocks out of its way in order to give the boy a chance to see it. It was a big thing for the boy.

THE RICHMOND TIMES says that it is a small matter to Chicago whether the south takes part in the world's fair or stays away. But is a matter of considerable importance to the south. We should be on deck at the fair, and make the best display possible.

THE NEW YORK penal system allows just such infernal crimes in the name of justice as we have in Georgia. A magistrate in New York, the other day, sentenced a fourteen-year old girl to ten days' hard labor and three months in the reformatory for stealing a magazine worth 20 cents.

THE SPEECH of Colonel P. H. Brewster yesterday in the case of the state vs. James M. Wilson, added new laurels to his reputation as a lawyer. He made the concluding argument in the case, which had consumed several days in trial, spoke only one hour and a quarter, but in which he finished no more could have been said for his client, and every one who heard his speech was satisfied his client would be acquitted of the grave charge against him. The state was well represented, and the verdict shows the defendant had men who handled his defense with great ability.

A DAY WITH THE EDITORS.

Editor Ben M. Russell, senior editor of The Atlanta Democrat, has folded his arms and departed for his new field of labor—Waycross—where he has never had, and is in talking to some of his old friends yesterday he repeated his departure. Editor Russell received an ovation from the citizens of Bainbridge, who give him up with regret. Speeches were made in his honor, and he was presented with a magnificent gold watch as a token of the love and respect of the citizens.

Nearly every week in the state has a humorist attached to its staff. This is a new feature, but a good one. The humorist holds the editor to his infirmities and keeps him in a good humor when the fish are not biting.

Smiling Trox Bankston, of The Ringgold News South, was in the city yesterday. Trox boarded the presidential train at Chattanooga, shook hands with every man on board, dined with President Harrison and came off with a silver badge and an illuminated bill of fare.

AN IDYL OF THE COUNTRY.
 O, the blooming trees are awaking!
 And the pretty maid is wishing,
 For her lover, near the lilies in the lane;
 And a million birds are singing!
 And the fish—the fish are biting once again!
 The fields of fern and clover
 Have been wondrously snowed over
 By a storm of milk-white daisies and the like;
 And the pretty maid is waiting
 And the editor is angling!
 "News is scarce," and half the country's on a strike!

"Bill Plunk," the humorist of The Talbotton News Era, got the following:
 Jones—I never was so dry in my life. What shall I do for water?
 Smith—Don't do what a friend of mine did in Talbotton.
 Jones—What did he do?
 Smith—Why, he ruined a $2 spirit level to obtain a spoonful of alcohol.

Editor Whitmore is still holding the fort on The Brunswick Daily Times, and his paragraphs are among the brightest things that come to us from the seashore of Glynn.

The Talbotton News Era tells this amusing story of an impudent Georgia humorist:
 He had to practice rigid economy to pay for his office as well as to make a living. He lived in his office and slept in one corner on a pile of papers, prepared his own meals, and consisted only of cheese and rice. He used his paste pot in which to cook his rice, and his frugal meal off of the "back" of the press and wiped his mouth with the "typewriter." It was a waste of money for him to buy matches, so he "covered up" fire. Persistent economy after while enabled him to pay for his paper, and then fortune seemed to smile upon him. He got married, was elected constable, and appointed sexton of the Methodist church. It is needless to say that he is prospering, and honors still continue to be heaped upon him by those who admire his determination and appreciate his worth.

The Sunday Constitution.
 From The Butler, Ga., Herald.
 The Sunday edition of THE CONSTITUTION is equal in quantity and quality of matter to many of the magazines of the north. The price of this edition is only $2 per year. The way to create southern literature is to patronize southern papers and periodicals. The patronage which Harper's magazine received from the south alone prior to the war, enabled the publishers of that periodical to make it a first-class magazine. And the principal editor of that magazine in earlier years, was Dr. Lipscombe—a southern man.

Senator Brown received man souvenirs from his friends yesterday, but none were prettier than a floral piece from Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dooly, with figures of violets in the center, "1891, 1891."

Colonel Tip Harrison can do more work in a given time than any other man in America. He handles more pension applications, approving or rejecting them, and does it more thoroughly and correctly than an entire bureau, or a chief and a score of clerks, in the government pension office at Washington. How he does it all is a mystery, but he does it, and it is properly done.

"I understand," said he yesterday, "that there is a fellow up in one of the north Georgia counties who is drawing a pension from the government for services in the union army, and another from the state for services in the confederate army. He was a confederate soldier, and is entitled to the state pension, but he manages to get almost as much a month from the government as he does from the state annually."

"A confederate veteran from Habersham told me a good one," he continued. "Two fellows up there wanted government pensions. A sent on an application to Washington, properly drawn up and sworn to, in which B made a sworn statement to the effect that A had contracted such a case of rheumatism in the union army that on a certain day he had to carry him across a certain river on his shoulders. The pension was granted. A month later B sent on an application for a pension, in which A swore he had carried B across the same river on the same day because B had contracted such a case of rheumatism in the service that he could not walk. The result in his death to ford the stream. By some means the pension office traced the two together, and B received a letter stating that before he could get a pension he would have to get another fellow to carry him across that stream."

"It looks as if we were going to get Augusta leveled as we cost the city a cent," said a well-known Augusta yesterday. "I understand one of the railroads has offered to build the levee for the privilege of laying their tracks upon it and getting an entrance into the city without payment to the owners of the street railroad franchise. It's a splendid thing for the city, and I have no doubt the council will accept it. Then Augusta can laugh at high water."

The Greatest in the South.
 From The Ringgold, Ga., News South.
 In the future the great ATLANTA CONSTITUTION will be a ten-page paper, daily. Where and when the improvements and enlargements of this metropolitan journal will end, no one can surmise. Today it is the greatest and most successful paper in the southland.

For Free Silver.
 The democratic alliance of the south will take part in the political primaries and meetings leading up to the appointment of the delegates to the national convention, and they are, almost to a man, in favor of the free coinage of silver. They are in the south by scores of thousands. In addition to that contingent, there are fully as many non-alliance free coinage democrats, who stand unalterably for that policy and against making the light of 1892 solely on tariff reform—leaving the golden Cleveland advocates in a very decided minority in this section. In Georgia, it will be only through the abstention of the democratic masses alone mentioned from taking part in the sending of delegates to the state convention that the advocates of silver can hope to get any showing at all in the convention.

The True Way.
 "Who is that pompous idiot over there?"
 "I don't know. But I'll tell you where to find out."
 "Where?"
 "Ask the pompous idiot."

PEOPLE HERE AND THERE.
 HOBBS.—Captain Here thinks an incorrect impression with regard to Tipps Tib, the great Arab leader in Central Africa. He says that Tipps Tib has never been a large slave trader, but that on account of his power and influence many natives have voluntarily placed themselves under his care, and are voluntarily his servants.

BEAUNT.—One of the most noted women in England, Mrs. Annie Besant, who has a world-wide reputation as a social, religious and political reformer, has just arrived in this country. Her long association with Charles Bradlaugh, in the English secularist movement, and her works upon social relations first brought her into prominence.

EDISON.—Mr. Edison makes no claims to being an electrician, it is said. He says that the experts in electrical science who are associated with him discover a certain force, or the need of a certain force or property, and he tries to make a machine or instrument to utilize or produce such a force. "I am a mechanic, not an electrician," he said, "and I have no wish to claim the credit due to the gentlemen associated with me. I am an inventor, not an electrician."

LAUREY.—The London correspondent of The New York Times writes that the last stage of the Jersey Lily episode has been reached. He says that Mrs. Laurey appealed to the curiosity of theater-goers in England and America solely as a beautiful animal from the prince of Wales private collection. Last winter she tried an unparalleled exposure of her mature charms in "Cleopatra" to small purposes. She was a dead failure in "Lady Berber," and in her last venture "Linda Gray," she was hanged.

Senator Brown is in better health than he has enjoyed for two years, and the chances are that he will survive the four-score mark. He is yet a little weak, but his complexion is ruddy and his spirits are wonderful for a man of his age. And his mind, it is as vigorous or more so than it ever was. Senator Brown has a wonderful memory. He never forgets a name or an incident. Indeed, he remembers every conversation of importance that he has ever had, and is in talking to some of his old friends yesterday he repeated almost verbatim conversations he had with them years ago.

"Senator, I am surprised to see how well you look."

"Well, I am feeling much better," he replied, "but my strength does not come back so fast as I should like. You know it has been said that 'man's allotted days on earth are three score years and ten, and if by reason of strength they be four score, yet is there strength, labor and sorrow.' But his mission is fulfilled at three score and ten. I have been thinking today of the prominent men in the state during my first term as governor. There are but few remaining. Indeed, you can almost count them on the fingers of one hand. Then, I was considered, perhaps, the most delicate of them all."

In speaking of his friends in the senate, Senator Brown said it has given him much pleasure to have met Senator Gorman in his recent visit. He has also been pleased to have calls from Senators Allison, Manderson and other senators who had been in Atlanta recently.

Senator Brown talked of the pleasant days he had spent in the senate, and told how it happened that he secured the very foremost seat on the democratic side. The seat was occupied by David Davis when Senator Brown first entered the senate. He was back in the corner, the most undesirable desk in the chamber. He and Senator Davis became warm personal friends, and one day Davis told him that when his term expired, and said he would like Senator Brown to get his seat. Captain Bassett, the venerable sergeant-at-arms, was called up and Senator Davis had him put Senator Brown's name down for his seat to be gotten two years later. But, in the meantime, Senator Davis was elected president of the senate, and Senator Brown got the seat earlier than he had anticipated. It is the most sought-after seat in the chamber. Senator Colquhoun spoke for it a year ago, and he will now get it, although Senator Reagan has been a squatter in it since Senator Brown left Washington.

losses sustained in a New Orleans mob in 1891. The consideration upon which this resolution was passed were held not to constitute the official position of Mr. Webster, shared also by President Fillmore.

The right to judicial remedy which Mr. Webster secured to Spanish subjects is likewise secured to Italian subjects. The right is specified in the third article of the constitution. And, as Mr. Webster points out, a resident alien has the same privilege as is denied to a citizen. Widows and children of citizens who lost their lives by mob violence, may sue leaders and members of the mob only in the courts of the state of Louisiana; while widows and children of Italian subjects who suffered death have the right to sue each member of the mob, not only in the state courts, but also before the federal tribunals for the district of Louisiana.

LOUISIANA CLAY CO. JUSTICE.

Provision is made in the revised civil code of Louisiana for redress of such grievances as widows and children of victims may plead. I quote:

"Article 234. Every act whatever which causes damage to another obliges him by whose fault it happened to repair it. The right of this action shall survive, in case of death, to the minor children and the widow of the deceased, or the surviving father or mother, or either of them, for the space of one year from death."

"Article 235. Every person is responsible for damage he occasions, not merely by his negligence, his imprudence, or his want of skill."

"Article 236. He who causes another person to do an unlawful act, or assists or encourages in commission of it, is answerable in solidum with that person for the damage caused by it."

THE DIFFERENCE IN THE TWO CASES.

The government of the United States would feel justified in resting its argument and conclusion on Mr. Webster if the mob of March 26, 1891, did not, in some of its characteristics, differ from the mob of 1891. But it is due to entire candor, and to the government, and due to the government of Italy to point out certain differences which the government of the United States is bound to take notice of.

In case of the mob of 1891, Webster asserts that "no personal injury was offered to any one" that, "police and other legal authorities did all that was possible to preserve peace and order, and that the mob acted in heat of blood and not in pursuance of any determined plan or purpose of injury or insult;" that "the mob was composed of irresponsible persons, the names of none of whom are known to the government of the United States, nor, so far as the government is informed, to its officers or agents in New Orleans."

As promptly as possible after the lamentable occurrence at New Orleans the president directed the attorney general to cause, through his department, a full inquiry to be made into the facts connected therewith, and solicited his opinion whether any criminal proceedings would lie under federal laws in the federal courts against persons charged with the killing of the Italian subjects. He has not received the official report. If it be found that prosecution can be maintained under the statutes of the United States, the case will be presented to the grand jury, according to the usual methods of criminal administration. But it should be found, as seems probable, that criminal proceedings can only be taken in the courts of Louisiana, the president can in this direction do no more than to urge upon the state officials the expediency of bringing the offenders to trial. This was done in the telegram to the governor of Louisiana as early as the 15th of March.

THE DUTY OF THE UNITED STATES.

If it shall result that the case can be prosecuted only in the state courts of Louisiana, the United States cannot assume that such will be the case.

The United States did not by treaty with Italy become the insurer of the lives or property of the Italian subjects resident within our territory. No government is able, however high its civilization, however vigilant its police supervision, however prompt and inflexible its criminal administration, to secure its own citizens against violence from the lawless mobs of other countries. It is a foreign resident must be content in such cases to share the redress that is offered by law to the citizen, and has no just cause of complaint or right to ask the interposition of his government, if the government equally open to him for the redress of his injuries.

EQUAL TREATMENT AND JUSTICE.

The treaty in first, second, third, and notably in the twenty-third article, clearly and fully guaranteed to the citizens of contracting powers in the territory of each to equal treatment and to free access to the courts of justice. Foreign residents are not made a favored class of objects. It is believed that Italy would desire a more stringent construction of her duty under the treaty. Where injury is inflicted upon a foreign resident and is not the act of the government, or of its officers, but of an individual or of a mob, it is believed that no claim for indemnity can justly be made unless it shall be made to appear that the public authorities, charged with the peace of the community have connived at the unlawful act, or have failed to prevent it. The United States has been guilty of such gross negligence in taking necessary precautions as to amount to connivance.

If, therefore, it should appear that among those killed by the mob at New Orleans there were some Italian subjects who were resident or domiciled in that city, agreeably to our treaty with Italy, and not in violation of immigration laws, and who were adding to the peace of the United States by obeying the laws thereof and of the state of Louisiana, it would be the duty of the United States to protect the life and property in the city of New Orleans, or, upon proper notice of information of the threat to the life of the Italian subjects, to take any steps for the preservation of the public peace and afterwards to bring the guilty to trial, the president would under such circumstances, feel that a case was established that could be submitted to the consideration of congress with a view to the relief of the families of the Italian subjects who had lost their lives by lawless violence.

Accept, sir, renewed assurances of my consideration.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

There are several significant features in the correspondence made public today in addition to the diplomatic argument proper. In the first place there should be noted absolute correspondence of the text of Rudini's note with the statement of its contents cabled from Rome by the associated press. There are slight differences of phrase between the two, but these are explained by the fact that the translation of the Italian dispatches into English were made by different persons, and the substance is precisely alike in either case. It will be observed that Marquis Rudini personally acknowledges the receipt of Blaine's letter regarding Fava's departure; that, while he transmits Rudini's views, they are over his own signature, and that Secretary Blaine, in his last letter (April 14th), addressed himself to Marquis Rudini. These facts may be regarded as final evidence that, so far from diplomatic relations between the two countries having been interrupted, they are in the most cordial and friendly footing as the minister had not quit Washington for the marquis appears to be discharging the full functions of his office. Such, for instance, is the fact required to be proved by the Italian minister to the United States, that he is not a minister but a secretary, and so on as minister he received Secretary Blaine's note last night, but its publication was deferred until today in order to oblige the marquis and afford opportunity to Marquis Rudini to transmit the note by cable to his government in advance of its publication to the world.

Secretary Blaine's note contains internal evidence that this government has not been threatened if an answer was delayed, or disregarded for such threat if it were made in the leisurely manner in which he states that the president "has taken full time for consideration" of the treaty questions involved.

It is also noticeable that the secretary promptly checks the attempt made in Italy to commit the United States to a promise to pay indemnity by pointing to the guarded language of his first dispatch and indulging in a number of qualifications, the purpose of which is to require a complete demonstration of several matters that may be very hard to demonstrate. Such, for instance, is the fact required to be proved by the Italian minister to the United States, namely, that the Louisiana officials connived at the killing of the Italians, or that they purposely failed to perform their duties. It is also significant that the secretary has found small authority for the assumption in some quarters that the United States may prosecute the guilty parties in its own tribunals, but it appears that the department of justice is still wrestling with the problem.

RALPH, N. C., April 15. (Special.)--This afternoon Mon. Kemp F. Battle, president of the state university, passed here on his way to Goldsboro to appear in a remarkable case. Two years ago at the commencement of the university, Kirby Smith, of Goldsboro, was arrested, charged with having painted red the monument to Dr. Caldwell, the first president of the university. Smith raised a great stir. Smith some months ago brought suit against President Battle and the trustees for $10,000 for false arrest. President Battle will give his evidence in the case tomorrow.

Says that "soup is the introduction to the ceremony of dining." A plate of hot, nourishing, savory soup is an essential to the beginning of a good dinner. Care and skill, however, and generally the personal effort of the housewife herself, are required to make good soup. We are glad to announce to our many patrons that good and nutritious soup, at a moderate price, can be had without the trouble of making. Our stock of the Franco-American Food Company's soups has just been replenished, and you can find any variety you may want upon our shelves.

"Care and cleanliness" should be the motto of the cook, says Mr. Harland, its proprietor, and the motto is carried out in every department of his enlarged edition of a model kitchen. Isn't it pleasant to have customers compliment you on the quality of your goods? Our constant aim has always been to keep only the best, and the results have been pleased customers and business a genuine pleasure.

Now, is it not hard for you to always get butter to please you? We have just made a contract with the finest creamery in the bluegrass regions of Tennessee. The contract will run a year, and the butter will always be the same. Leave your name and address, and let us supply you regularly, and you will always have good butter.

Our California peaches, pears, white cherries and apricots are selling rapidly. Their fine flavor and low prices commend them to all. The price still remains at $3.50 per dozen.

Tennesses. The contract will run a year, and the butter will always be the same. Leave your name and address, and let us supply you regularly, and you will always have good butter.

WEDDING BELLS.

THE MARRIAGE OF MISS HUNNICUTT TO DR. TYLER.

An Event Which Interests All Society—A Beautiful Ceremony at the First Methodist Church—Other Society News.

A wedding more brilliant, elegant and artistic was never seen in Atlanta than that which united Dr. Charles O. Tyler and Miss Edith Payne Hunnicutt, at the First Methodist church last evening. First and foremost the bride herself was an ideal in every way; then her bridesmaids were themselves remarkably bright in loveliness and the music and adornment of the church rounded out the affair to full artistic completion.

The altar was a bank of rich palms and pure lilies and many white tapers encircled the chancel. On an arch in the background a soft rainbow shone.

The music was exquisitely rendered by Mrs. Arthur Richards, and Dr. Morrison returned from Texas to perform the ceremony.

The procession was from Wagner, and the bride entered in the following order: Ushers, Dr. W. S. Ekin, Dr. N. O. Harris, Mr. Percy Adams, Mr. Stovall Hall.

Groomsmen—Mr. L. N. Hunnicutt and Mr. James Carlton; Mr. W. S. Greene and Mr. L. P. Felder; Mr. Thomas E. Lewis and Mr. Andrew C. Calhoun; Mr. William Hill and Mr. Fulton Colville.

Bridesmaids—Miss Claude Lewis and Miss Annie Wilson; Miss Willie and Miss Annie Bass; Miss Janie Smith and Miss Mary Ella Reed; Miss Della Dougherty and Miss Clara Sanders.

A rainbow effect was carried out in the gowns of the bridesmaids, which were white, buff, pink and green, each couple wearing the same color. The effect was simply charming. The gowns were silk with deep lace frills down the front, and low necks; the large bouquets were carnations tied with ribbons to match the gown.

The groom entered from the vestry room with his best man, Mr. James McKelvin.

And the bride came down the aisle with her maid of honor, Miss Sallie Hunnicutt, who was so graciously assisted by Miss Sallie Hunnicutt.

The beauty of Miss Edith Hunnicutt is far famed. With her perfect and exquisite womanly face she has a stately figure and a bearing full of graceful dignity. As a bride she made a picture so strikingly beautiful and majestic that as she entered a hush fell upon the vast assembly of people. It is generally of her gown that the people think when looking on a bride, but this bride's gown was so inconspicuous beside her beauty that it seemed more the fit drapery of an elixir marble than the conventional wedding dress. It was a long-trained white fall with a white shirt panel of duchesse lace, a Median collar of the same to the bodice, and long sleeves. The flowers were lilies of the valley and white roses; the long illusion veil was fastened upon the soft waves of exquisite brown hair by many tiny blue set with pearls and diamonds, and the finger rings were diamonds, among them a bracelet of magnificent diamonds and sapphires, a gift from the groom.

As Dr. Morrison performed the ceremony with earnest eloquence the "Spring Song" was softly played, and for the recessional the Mendelssohn march was used.

After this, the wedding party and a few friends of relatives, repaired to the residence of Mr. C. W. Hunnicutt, the father of the bride. There an elegant reception was given. The handsome mansion was thrown entirely open, and brilliantly illuminated. All the decorations were green and white, the flowers and mantles being hand-painted with palms, against which shone the shining leaves of lilies and roses.

The supper room was exquisitely tasteful in its adornment. The mantels were filled with ferns and lilies, and the buffet, built into the wall, was laden with tropical fruits in silver and out glass bowls. The table was adorned in smalt, maiden hair fern and lilies. A wreath of calla lilies in the center surrounded a cut glass bowl filled with lilies of the valley; white water lilies, with delicate green shades in silver candelabra, beautiful bed cakes and rare crystal and silver ornaments.

After the perfect dinner, the bride and groom, with the bridesmaids, retired to the room on the left, the presents were arranged, and the array was simply dazzling. Among them was a superb case of silver, the gift of the bride's father, and many other pieces of silver, china and cut glass deserve description in detail.

At 11 o'clock the happy pair left amid a shower of rice and congratulations for their wedding journey. They will go west, first visiting Cincinnati and the great lakes and returning by New York. They will be absent some two or three weeks, and upon their return will be at home to their friends at Mr. C. W. Hunnicutt's, on Spring street.

Never was a marriage made with brighter prospects than this one. Miss Hunnicutt has had at her home, since her entrance into society, a host of suitors, and among them she has held out for those noble and gentle traits which go to the making of a true woman.

Dr. Charles O. Tyler has long been identified with Atlanta business and social life. In the latter he is a favorite by reason of his delightful nature and cultured manners; in the former he is known as a young man who has already won his way to honorable fortune. All who know the happy pair have the best wishes to give for their future life together.

In the Chattanooga Times society correspondence from Knoxville appears the following which will be of interest to Atlanta people:

Miss Katherine Humphrey entertained at dinner Thursday evening, complimentary to the Atlanta party. Covers were laid for twenty, and the menu was one of the loveliest ever served in Knoxville. The Atlanta party were the invited guests of Judge Tompkins, attorney for the Knoxville Southern road, and were in the city en route to Middleborough. Before the party was delayed for twenty-four hours, and reached the city Thursday evening, and were driven at once to the Vendome, where they were entertained by Miss Humphrey.

Friday the party spent at the Vendome, a large German being given Friday night, by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, at Hotel Middleborough, in their honor.

The reception and dancing party last evening at the residence of Miss Nellie Knight, at the Vendome, in honor of the Atlanta party, was a most delightful occasion. The large rooms were all thrown open to the reception of guests, and during the evening dancing was indulged in, followed later by a German being given Friday night, by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, at Hotel Middleborough, in their honor.

The reception and dancing party last evening at the residence of Miss Nellie Knight, at the Vendome, in honor of the Atlanta party, was a most delightful occasion. The large rooms were all thrown open to the reception of guests, and during the evening dancing was indulged in, followed later by a German being given Friday night, by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, at Hotel Middleborough, in their honor.

A delightful menu of the choicest refreshments was served. The Atlanta party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Medley, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Miss Barker, Miss Cooke, Miss Venable, Mr. B. W. Lee, Mr. A. W. Hill, Mr. W. P. Hill, Mr. H. D. Lafferty, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Frank Moberly and Judge Tompkins. The guests present throughout the evening numbered 100, and the occasion was one of the most pleasant of the entire winter.

Mrs. Hugh Angier and some of her advanced pupils, Miss Nellie Knight, Nellie Closson and Anna Caine, assisted by Mr. Mayer, the brilliant pianist and composer; Mr. Young, the delightful dilettante violinist; and Mr. Angier, the dramatic tenor, gave an impromptu musicale last Monday night to a large circle of friends, who are lovers of music by the great composers, and have had unexceptional opportunities of hearing grand music in the great cities of this country and Europe.

It was the unqualified opinion of the many severe critics present that such a collection of good singers could only be found in a metropolis. Mrs. Angier is certainly a wizard at vocal production. Her voice is only in the grand opera houses of New York that voices can be found to compare with those of her pupils, Miss Knight, Miss Caine and Miss Closson, while Mr. and Mrs. Angier have moments when their voices are incomparable in beauty of tone and intensity of dramatic effects.

Mr. Mayer played, in his delicate and exceptionally beautiful style, several selections of Weber.

Mr. and Mrs. Angier and Miss Knight were fairly electrifying in their superb rendering of one of Verdi's grand trios. Miss Nellie Closson sang two arias from operas by Donizetti, and captivated all by her exquisite style and warmth of expression.

Mr. Young played superbly several selections of Wier and Beethoven. Mr. Angier sang grandly a selection from Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots," such a tender voice is rarely heard except in the great opera house. He has truly a great tenor voice. Miss Mary Henderson, a fine pianist, who has studied only a few months with Mrs. Angier, has a beautiful voice of deep feeling, and gives promise for a most future of a powerful and sympathetic mezzo soprano voice. Miss Nellie Knight's mezzo soprano showed to great advantage in the aria from "Semiramide," her execution of difficult roulades and trills is well along, while her glorious voice is inimitable. The enthusiasm of the evening reached a climax in the duet from "Il Guarany," in which they took the high C, Mr. Angier producing a most effective and powerful chest tone, not excelled by the greatest tenors.

Mrs. Angier has performed wonders in voice production, and when she and Mr. Angier leave for Europe next fall, to be gone a year or more, her pupils will feel an irreparable loss, as their enthusiasm and devotion are marvelous.

One of the most delightful entertainments since Lent was the dance and card party at the Talmadge house, given in honor of Miss Kate Sandford, one of Mississippi's most beautiful ladies. Among those present were Misses Carrier, Fowler, Morhead, Sandford, Marks, Deane, Alf Howell, Whittemore, Atwood, Fisher, Mrs. Howe, Adams, Howell, Talmadge, Schlesinger, Mrs. Evans of Nashville. Among the gentlemen, Dr. E. E. Ekin, Howell, Johnson, Messrs. Deane, Alf Fowler, J. M. Jenkins, Torrance Knight, Pierce, Whittemore, Pope, Jones, Davidson, Adams, Bertrand, McGill, Hammond Allen McCollough, Adams, Miles, et al.

Dainty refreshments were served by the kind hostess, Mrs. Talmadge.

TELEPHONING ABOUT HER WEDDING TROUSSEAU.

An Interesting Description of Some of the Gowns and of the Other Portions of the Outfit.

What a mistake it is on the part of the woman ambitious to dress well and a little bit differently from the rest of her sex to wait until late in the season to purchase her wardrobe. This woman thinks by so doing she gets the best and most unique fabrics, but it is not so. While exquisite things are being brought out each week, none are scarcely so enticing as those which show in the shops at the spring opening. It is for this opening that artists have been studying all winter, and a summer's visit amid the flowers. These artists bring out their fair dreams upon silks and organdies, grenadines, gingham, embroideries and soft woolen stuffs, and the merchants choose from this vast supply of flower-scattered fabrics the sweetest, the daintiest, the most artistic for that time when Lenten tales and charities are over.

April weddings, cotillions and receptions are at hand.

Many sensible women are recognizing this fact, and the result it that they have purchased and have made most of the gowns that will grace the spring season. This is true, also, of those for the summer resorts later on.

This first cut shows one of the spring gowns just purchased and finished for the trousseau of a beautiful Atlanta girl, who is to wed.

Cards have been received announcing the arrival in Jacksonville, Fla., April 4th, of Miss Fannie Rankin Young, daughter of Judge and Mrs. W. B. Young, and granddaughter of Dr. J. W. Rankin. Her arrival was most auspicious, and it is the wish of the many friends of the parents that her stay may be prolonged indefinitely.

Miss Estelle Whelan, a charming young lady of Atlanta, is visiting Mrs. Joseph Cardell, at Rome, Ga.

A very pretty wedding occurred last night at the home at Mrs. Jacob Eisenman, on Marietta avenue.

It united Miss Clara Freitag and Mr. Simon Metzger, Rabbi Reicher officiating. The wedding was quiet, being attended by relatives and a few invited friends only. After the ceremony a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Metzger, where the bride and groom received the hearty congratulations of their friends.

Miss Freitag is a very popular young lady, numbering a large circle of friends. Mr. Metzger is a former resident of Atlanta, and is a prominent merchant of Mississippi, highly esteemed.

At Tuscaloosa, Ala., Tuesday night, Mr. Joe Willingham, an Atlantian, was united in marriage to Miss Christine Tyler.

Miss Lett Willingham, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Winnie T. Willingham acted as maid of honor and best man respectively.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left for a trip to New Orleans, and on the 20th will arrive at Atlanta, when they will be at home at the residence of Mr. Aakew, 57 Jackson street.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—W. J. J. Fox, a prominent young contractor of Chattanooga, and Miss Katie Bulger, a charming young lady of this city, were married last evening and left immediately after the ceremony for Chattanooga.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—A quiet marriage took place last night at 8:30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Delano Piper, Mr. V. B. Hemstreet and Miss Emmie Piper were married by Rev. Mr. Yarbrough, pastor of St. James church.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. Sloan Young, formerly of Thomasville, but now one of Montgomery's most successful young business men, was married yesterday to Miss Mary Mackay, daughter of the latter's mother in this city. The bride is a most lovely and charming young lady.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. M. L. Covington, mail agent on the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad, and Miss Belle Smith, Western Union telegraph company, were married at this place, were married last night at the residence of Mr. G. W. Smith, father of the bride. Dr. T. F. Cheney performed the ceremony.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. J. B. E. Brown left yesterday at 10 o'clock for Cave Spring, where he will wed tomorrow night, Miss Mattie Harper, a beautiful young lady of that place. Mr. Brown is one of the most prominent business men of our city, being now cashier of the Carrollton bank. Messrs. W. H. Shaw, H. L. Bradley, F. S. Wilson, E. C. Stewart and Mr. Harper and Miss Ruth Brown will attend the nuptials.

They will have a special train from Rome to Cave Spring. At Rome a large crowd of young people will join the bridal party. Dr. Headen, of Rome, will perform the marriage ceremony.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—There was a beautiful nuptial high mass in St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock this morning. The ceremony united the lives of Miss Mary Mullarky, eldest daughter of Mr. Austin Mullarky, of Augusta, and Mr. John P. Hartz, of Savannah. Rev. Father O'Brien officiated. There were a number of attendants. After the breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Hartz left for their new home in Savannah.

Miss Daisy Ball, daughter of Captain Frank Ball, one of the oldest engineers on the Georgia railroad, was married at 10 o'clock this morning by Rev. J. S. Lamar, in the First Christian church, to Mr. James H. White, of Johnston, S. C. Miss Lilly Brenner, of Atlanta, was one of the bridesmaids. Mr. and Mrs. White have gone to Atlanta and for a trip west on a bridal tour.

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Captain W. A. Kelly and Mrs. Lillie Morris were married this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

BARNEVELLE, Ga., April 15.—The society people of Barneville were on the qui vive for some time prior to last Friday evening in anticipation of the phantom party given by the young ladies to the guests of the city.

The elegant parlors of the Blacklock house were never more attractively furnished than on this occasion. Spring flowers and graceful creepers, under the deft fingers of the decorators, converted every room, alcove and balcony into a lower of beauty.

Miss Blacklock and Mrs. Woodward, her daughter, are noted for their elegant entertainments. The occasion they occupied all former entertainments.

The excitement and mystery of the masks occupied the first hours. Delightful refreshments, prepared by the young ladies added much to the enjoyment.

Miss Berta Abbott, of Atlanta, the guest of Miss May Stafford, and Messrs. Roland Ellis, of Macon; Cyrus Sharp, of Forsyth; Will Searcy, of Griffin, and Addie Rose, Alvin Pound and Frank, of Emory college, were welcome visitors.

The young ladies never looked lovelier. Time and space forbid a description of the many beautiful evening costumes.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

At Services Which Are Resulting in a Large Amount of Good.

At Walker street Methodist Episcopal church revival services are in progress which, judging from the interest taken and the results accomplished, are of much concern and importance.

The services are being conducted under the auspices of the North Georgia Holiness Association. Among those participating are some of the best known and ablest divines and evangelists of the country. They are: Rev. W. A. Dodge, of Atlanta; Dr. George Watson, of Winson, Fla.; Dr. William Hayles, commissioner of education of Payne's institute; Bishop James Key, of Texas; Dr. A. T. Reilly, of Kansas; Dr. J. F. Anderson, of the South Carolina conference; and Dr. Godby, of Kentucky.

The meetings began regularly Sunday night after a week's preliminary gathering. Every morning are held Bible readings, led by Dr. Godby, and preaching. In the afternoon are experience meetings. At night, after devotional services, some members of the association deliver a sermon.

The number of conversions thus far has been very large, and this encouraging state of affairs has prompted the association to remain until Sunday, the 26th, a week longer than originally intended. Next week Dr. Duncan will conduct the Bible readings.

Revival.

East Atlanta Baptist church, Bradley street, Dr. E. E. Ekin, pastor, assisted by Rev. A. Arnold, of Lithonia. Preaching at 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. during this week.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—A quiet marriage took place last night at 8:30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Delano Piper, Mr. V. B. Hemstreet and Miss Emmie Piper were married by Rev. Mr. Yarbrough, pastor of St. James church.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. Sloan Young, formerly of Thomasville, but now one of Montgomery's most successful young business men, was married yesterday to Miss Mary Mackay, daughter of the latter's mother in this city. The bride is a most lovely and charming young lady.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. M. L. Covington, mail agent on the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad, and Miss Belle Smith, Western Union telegraph company, were married at this place, were married last night at the residence of Mr. G. W. Smith, father of the bride. Dr. T. F. Cheney performed the ceremony.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Mr. J. B. E. Brown left yesterday at 10 o'clock for Cave Spring, where he will wed tomorrow night, Miss Mattie Harper, a beautiful young lady of that place. Mr. Brown is one of the most prominent business men of our city, being now cashier of the Carrollton bank. Messrs. W. H. Shaw, H. L. Bradley, F. S. Wilson, E. C. Stewart and Mr. Harper and Miss Ruth Brown will attend the nuptials.

They will have a special train from Rome to Cave Spring. At Rome a large crowd of young people will join the bridal party. Dr. Headen, of Rome, will perform the marriage ceremony.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—There was a beautiful nuptial high mass in St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock this morning. The ceremony united the lives of Miss Mary Mullarky, eldest daughter of Mr. Austin Mullarky, of Augusta, and Mr. John P. Hartz, of Savannah. Rev. Father O'Brien officiated. There were a number of attendants. After the breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Hartz left for their new home in Savannah.

Miss Daisy Ball, daughter of Captain Frank Ball, one of the oldest engineers on the Georgia railroad, was married at 10 o'clock this morning by Rev. J. S. Lamar, in the First Christian church, to Mr. James H. White, of Johnston, S. C. Miss Lilly Brenner, of Atlanta, was one of the bridesmaids. Mr. and Mrs. White have gone to Atlanta and for a trip west on a bridal tour.

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga., April 15.—(Special.)—Captain W. A. Kelly and Mrs. Lillie Morris were married this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

BARNEVELLE, Ga., April 15.—The society people of Barneville were on the qui vive for some time prior to last Friday evening in anticipation of the phantom party given by the young ladies to the guests of the city.

The elegant parlors of the Blacklock house were never more attractively furnished than on this occasion. Spring flowers and graceful creepers, under the deft fingers of the decorators, converted every room, alcove and balcony into a lower of beauty.

Miss Blacklock and Mrs. Woodward, her daughter, are noted for their elegant entertainments. The occasion they occupied all former entertainments.

The excitement and mystery of the masks occupied the first hours. Delightful refreshments, prepared by the young ladies added much to the enjoyment.

Miss Berta Abbott, of Atlanta, the guest of Miss May Stafford, and Messrs. Roland Ellis, of Macon; Cyrus Sharp, of Forsyth; Will Searcy, of Griffin, and Addie Rose, Alvin Pound and Frank, of Emory college, were welcome visitors.

The young ladies never looked lovelier. Time and space forbid a description of the many beautiful evening costumes.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

At Services Which Are Resulting in a Large Amount of Good.

At Walker street Methodist Episcopal church revival services are in progress which, judging from the interest taken and the results accomplished, are of much concern and importance.

The services are being conducted under the auspices of the North Georgia Holiness Association. Among those participating are some of the best known and ablest divines and evangelists of the country. They are: Rev. W. A. Dodge, of Atlanta; Dr. George Watson, of Winson, Fla.; Dr. William Hayles, commissioner of education of Payne's institute; Bishop James Key, of Texas; Dr. A. T. Reilly, of Kansas; Dr. J. F. Anderson, of the South Carolina conference; and Dr. Godby, of Kentucky.

The meetings began regularly Sunday night after a week's preliminary gathering. Every morning are held Bible readings, led by Dr. Godby, and preaching. In the afternoon are experience meetings. At night, after devotional services, some members of the association deliver a sermon.

The number of conversions thus far has been very large, and this encouraging state of affairs has prompted the association to remain until Sunday, the 26th, a week longer than originally intended. Next week Dr. Duncan will conduct the Bible readings.

Revival.

East Atlanta Baptist church, Bradley street, Dr. E. E. Ekin, pastor, assisted by Rev. A. Arnold, of Lithonia. Preaching at 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. during this week.

A BRIDE-TO-BE.

TELEPHONING ABOUT HER WEDDING TROUSSEAU.

An Interesting Description of Some of the Gowns and of the Other Portions of the Outfit.

What a mistake it is on the part of the woman ambitious to dress well and a little bit differently from the rest of her sex to wait until late in the season to purchase her wardrobe. This woman thinks by so doing she gets the best and most unique fabrics, but it is not so. While exquisite things are being brought out each week, none are scarcely so enticing as those which show in the shops at the spring opening. It is for this opening that artists have been studying all winter, and a summer's visit amid the flowers. These artists bring out their fair dreams upon silks and organdies, grenadines, gingham, embroideries and soft woolen stuffs, and the merchants choose from this vast supply of flower-scattered fabrics the sweetest, the daintiest, the most artistic for that time when Lenten tales and charities are over.

April weddings, cotillions and receptions are at hand.

Many sensible women are recognizing this fact, and the result it that they have purchased and have made most of the gowns that will grace the spring season. This is true, also, of those for the summer resorts later on.

This first cut shows one of the spring gowns just purchased and finished for the trousseau of a beautiful Atlanta girl, who is to wed.

Cards have been received announcing the arrival in Jacksonville, Fla., April 4th, of Miss Fannie Rankin Young, daughter of Judge and Mrs. W. B. Young, and granddaughter of Dr. J. W. Rankin. Her arrival was most auspicious, and it is the wish of the many friends of the parents that her stay may be prolonged indefinitely.

Miss Estelle Whelan, a charming young lady of Atlanta, is visiting Mrs. Joseph Cardell, at Rome, Ga.

A very pretty wedding occurred last night at the home at Mrs. Jacob Eisenman, on Marietta avenue.

It united Miss Clara Freitag and Mr. Simon Metzger, Rabbi Reicher officiating. The wedding was quiet, being attended by relatives and a few invited friends only. After the ceremony a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Metzger, where the bride and groom received the hearty congratulations of their friends.

Miss Freitag is a very popular young lady, numbering a large circle of friends. Mr. Metzger is a former resident of Atlanta, and is a prominent merchant of Mississippi, highly esteemed.

At Tuscaloosa, Ala., Tuesday night, Mr. Joe Willingham, an Atlantian, was united in marriage to Miss Christine Tyler.

Miss Lett Willingham, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Winnie T. Willingham acted as maid of honor and best man respectively.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left for a trip to New Orleans, and on the 20th will arrive at Atlanta, when they will be at home at the residence of Mr. Aakew, 57 Jackson street.

HE STIRRED THE TOWN

WITH A RINGING SERMON ON THE SAM JONES ORDER.

The Rev. M. A. Mathews Has Stirred Up a Hornet's Nest in Ringgold—Blind Tigers and Whisky Distilleries Denounced.

RINGGOLD, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—The temperance sermon preached here by Rev. M. A. Mathews, in the Presbyterian church, created a great sensation at the time, and is still the topic of conversation. The reverend gentleman did not spare the lash, but laid it on heavily, and it seems that he has mortally offended many people in Ringgold. A few extracts from his sermon will explain all:

In this fair county of Catonsville there is one distillery and in the town of Ringgold one blind tiger.

Again he has got a delivery house here in Ringgold because on your last election twenty-five jugs were sent out from an old house here in this town. Again he has got an agent who goes to Chattanooga and brings you a supply down on the accommodation. You meet that train and get your supply. You meet that train and get your supply. You meet that train and get your supply.

I visited your prayer meeting not very long ago one night, and when I came out of the church the whisky perfume was so great on some of your men that it was offensive to the ladies.

Again, some of you have not lost all of your respect, and you have it expressed in you in a little square box with straw packed around it.

Now, I want to see your counsel show all the manhood necessary and burst this business wide open. I want to see your grand jury prosecute to the last, and the men who are running this blind tiger. You have got more in this county who are agents for the devil and carry this hellish drug out to election precincts. I want the voters of this county to have enough manhood about them and stop voting for these whisky-jug candidates. They are not fit to serve anybody but the devil.

Again, you will find a whisky repository in some of the houses in Ringgold; you should be ashamed to make your houses the scene of the devil.

It is understood that Mr. Mathews was informed of the state of the station here, and made, and his sermon has provoked considerable public feeling for and against him. Sam Jones could not have laid it on heavier than he did. The sermon has stirred the town from one end to the other, and a big "kick" is going on in some quarters.

DUBLIN'S PROGRESS.

Subscribing for Bank Stock—Grading Railroads, Etc.

DUBLIN, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—The citizens of Dublin are very much interested at present in the effort to establish a bank here, the necessity for such an institution having long been felt. Mr. Joseph Parish has been here for the past two days, seeking to establish a branch of the "People's Bank," of Atlanta, in Dublin, and has met with all possible encouragement. The necessary amount of stock has been subscribed.

A force of hands is now at work grading the right of way of the Wrightsville and Tennessee railroad from the river to the proposed site of the new depot, about 300 yards from the courthouse in Dublin.

The Macon and Dublin railroad is rapidly nearing this place, and will probably be completed to Dublin within sixty days.

Landier & Walker are erecting a handsome brick three-story storehouse near the center of town, and several dwelling houses are now in process of construction.

Miss Rebecca Johnson, of this county, was married to Mr. Ira Threlkeld, also of this county, at the Baptist church in Dublin, on last Wednesday evening. The bride is a daughter of Mr. H. B. Johnson, one of Laurens county's most substantial citizens, and the groom is a prosperous and energetic young farmer.

THE BOYS WERE READY

When the War Summons Came—An April Joke.

DAWSON, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—A telegram was received last evening directed to Judge J. H. Guerry, captain of the Dawson Guards, purporting to have been sent by Governor Northen, and notifying Captain Guerry to hold his company in readiness to respond to orders from the secretary of war, as hostilities with Italy were about starting. The telegram created intense excitement, and the members of the company were stirred up and visions of carnage and scenes of warfare passed quickly through their minds.

A meeting of the company was called, and the patriotism of the boys was fully aroused, and all, except one or two, declared themselves ready to obey orders and defend the stars and stripes with their lives.

It is now surmised that the telegram was a clever joke perpetrated on the company, and that after all they will not just yet have a chance "to die for the union."

THE STORY OF A HORSE.

His Owner Missed Him for Three Days, and Found Him Between Two Trees.

VIENNA, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—A prominent citizen of Vienna tells a curious story of a runaway horse, and the story is vouched for by the editor of The Progress, published in this city. The pin broke that held the front wheels in place and the horse got loose. He ran with the front wheels and shafts for quite a distance, but finally demolished the wheels and the shafts still clinging to him. In attempting to run between two trees that were growing in a few feet of each other, the wide end of the shafts became fastened, and the horse could neither pull them through or back out. The owner, thinking that his horse would go immediately home, and not being a great way from home, contented himself, went home and to bed. After a three days' search he found his horse fastened in the manner described.

HE DROWNED HIS BOWROW.

A Disappointed Young Man Resorts to the Wine Cup.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—"My name is Texas, and I am the best man this side of Birmingham" was the hip, hip, hurrah of a neatly dressed young man from an adjoining county, on yesterday, as he flashed a glittering revolver above his head and declared himself monarch of all he surveyed.

The young man was under the influence of whisky, and was celebrating an occasion of parental interference. He is prominent in his neighborhood, and is regarded as one of the best young men in his section of the county; so his slipup yesterday is looked at in sorrow and sympathy, rather than disdain. He was engaged to a young lady in a different portion of the county, and the two had chosen this city as their trying place, were to meet yesterday and crown Cupid a victor. When the young lady arrived, however, she was accompanied by two brothers who declared the nuptials off. The young man sought the nearest cold had the effect of retarding the growth of the plants, but otherwise did no damage.

It is estimated that near this city alone 500 acres are set to this fruit.

Forty Widows Called.

DANIELSVILLE, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—The widows of Confederate veterans met the ordinary here today about forty strong, to apply for pension under the late statute of Georgia. There are about sixty of these widows in the county, and most of them will make good claims.

A Curious Ear of Corn.

JACKSON, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—There is an exhibition at the store of I. F. Bell an ear of corn that is a curiosity. It is after the shape of an ordinary ear, but each grain has a separate shuck on it, hiding the grain completely.

The First Picnic.

DAWSON, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—The young folks of our city are enjoying the first picnic of the season today at Dover's bridge, seven miles southwest of Dawson.

PRESTON'S MED-AKE

THE HAUNTED OAK

BENEATH WHICH A HEADLESS MAN WAS SEEN TO WALK.

A Historic Landmark in Elberton County Which the Woodman Did Not Spare. Old Memories Revived.

ELBERTON, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—The old post oak tree in the fork of the road, just below the home of Mr. R. E. Adams, in this county, is no more. The Elberton Gazette says that this tree has stood the storms of many winters, but does not give its exact age. The writer thinks that more than 100 years have passed over it.

The tree is known far and wide. It is known to the mountaineers, for when they would come down into this county to sell their products, they would tell their wives what night they would camp near the old oak and on that night when their little children whispered their prayers to heaven, they were changed from "God bless papa wherever he is," to "God bless papa near the old oak."

Tradition is that a murder was committed beneath this tree years ago, and now superstitious people say that the tree is haunted, and that at midnight a man without a head has been seen walking around beneath its branches. Parties say that the man has been struck at by a number of people; but the sick passed harmlessly through his misty form and left its imprint on the bark of the old oak. Will the ghost cease to walk since the tree has fallen? ask the superstitious people.

That is a hard question. The scared body of the old oak now lies scattered in all directions, and it is now only a memory.

HE HYPNOTIZED THEM.

But Some of the Students Were Too Much for the Professor.

MONROE, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—Professor J. C. Cannady, the phenologist and hypnotist, has been giving exhibitions of his skill here, to the delight of the people. As a hypnotist the professor performed wonderful feats, among the most notable being a horseback ride on chairs, in which Professor G. A. Nolan, Homer and Will Adams, Albert Mobley and Gord. Caldwell all took a hand. The audience went wild as the procession galloped across the stage. All of the subjects appeared in dead earnest. Will Adams was put into a cataleptic condition, and was laid with his head on one chair and his feet supported by another. The professor then proceeded to stand on him, putting his entire weight on his knees. Adams did not get up, but remained in that position. When he was again placed upon his feet, a pin was inserted into his arm, and he did not flinch from it.

The professor is certainly a master of the art, but during the second night's performance a number of Athens students presented themselves as subjects for hypnotism, and the professor did not make much headway with them. The students did not "hypnotize" to suit the audience, though the professor worked bravely to get them under his influence. You can't "down" the Athens student.

BEGINNING THE CAMPAIGN EARLY.

Mayor May Will Have Stubborn Opposition in the Race.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—Interest in the municipal election has already awakened, though the election is eight months off. The reformers or committee of one hundred, of course, will be in the field with a candidate to oppose Mayor May for re-election. Who he will have has not been decided upon. But straw tell which way the wind blows, and the general surmise is that Councilman Jesse Thompson, a wealthy citizen, and one of the largest lumber dealers in Georgia, will be Mayor May's opponent for mayor. Already the pulse of the voters are being felt, and soon elections will be dropping peas into their pockets. The campaign is gradually opening, and by July will be in full blast, and it will be the liveliest and most exciting election that has been held here in many years.

OPENING UP THE COUNTRY.

Augusta About to Have Another Fine Suburb.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—Fairmount, Augusta's largest suburb, is full of life and promise. A meeting of the owners and stockholders interested in the new company was held today. The company was organized on a solid basis. Fairmount is located on the Georgia railroad, a few miles out of the city, and south of Summerville and Monticello. It adjoins the sand hills, and is a healthy, elevated and charming as Sand Hill itself. Secretary Clark says the development will be begun, and the laying out of streets is already started. Houses, either in pretty cottages or necessary public buildings, will be put up. A handsome hotel, waterworks, telegraph station and other conveniences are contemplated.

OLD AND MELLOW.

Two Bottles of Liquor Hidden Away Over Forty Years Ago.

MADISON, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—In 1847, while the old Madison house was being built, Mr. Lester Markham, still a resident of this city, put three bottles of liquor in three of the masonry pillars in front of the structure. A few days ago, after the burning of the hotel, Mr. S. A. Tumell, who owns the property, had hands to dig into the pillars and found two of the long-hidden bottles safe and sound, and mellow with age—one of them containing rum and another peach brandy.

Mr. Tumell has since donated these two treasures of antiquity to the Madison Home Guards, and they will be raffled off. The liquor being forty-two years old, is quite a curiosity, and will be treasured by the lucky winner. Any one desiring to take a chance can write to Captain J. E. Godfrey, Madison, Ga.

Criminals Arrested.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—Henry Spencer, a negro desperado, who has long been wanted in this county, was arrested at DuPont and turned over to Sheriff Dodd. Henry Smith, who was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for burglary by the Colquitt county court, is in jail here. George Bradford, who was implicated in the attempted robbery and murder of Mr. Goldbach some months ago, has been captured.

The Barn Burned.

MONROE, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The barn of Colonel B. S. Walker was destroyed by fire about 10 o'clock Sunday night. Loss $400; no insurance. His excellent buggy horse was burned to death. Both doors were wide open, but the horse was so badly frightened he would not come out. This horse was quite a favorite with the ladies in the town, and many tears were shed on account of his terrible death.

Twenty Millions Capital Stock.

DARIEN, Ga., April 15.—[Special.]—Judge Falligant granted a charter of incorporation to the South Atlantic Land and Lumber Company. Capital stock, $20,000,000.

"YE OLDEN TIMES."

THE MEN WHO FIRST SERVED FULTON COUNTY

Public Officials—Some Peculiar Facts About the Bonds of the Officials and the Way Affairs Were Conducted.

In olden days! When Fulton county first became a fact. Good old times they were, as many will attest whose recollections run back into the dim and dusty past.

The first election for county officers for the new county occurred February 6, 1854.

At that time Hon. Obediah Warner, brother of Chief Justice Hiram Warner, was judge of the superior court in DeKalb, and held over after the new county was formed.

Court was held in a large building on the corner where the great Dodd building now stands, and it took about three weeks to wind up the business.

For that reason the work of the clerk and other court officers was not so hard, nor scarcely one-tenth so remunerative, as now. Afterwards the city of Atlanta, built, at the expense of the municipality, the courthouse which stood where the capitol of Georgia now stands. The county was allowed the use of one-half of the building free of rent or any other consideration, until, in later years, the present courthouse was built.

The superior court.

There is something quaint and interesting about the name of the "superior court."

It was one of the old-time institutions, and served its purpose well.

It had jurisdiction over the roads and revenues, which, in modern times, has been transferred to the county commissioners.

Besides this, it had jurisdiction in civil business, the same as the superior and county courts now have.

There were five judges, and the office was elective. That is one reason why so many of these jolly and old citizens wear so gracefully the title of "judge."

The earlier judges of this court in Fulton county were Judge J. A. Hayden, Judge James Donahoe, Judge C. H. Strong, Judge Samuel Walker and Judge Clark Howell, all good men and true, and two or three of them are still living, honored and useful citizens.

Officers of the Court.

Benjamin F. Bomar was the first clerk of the superior court. He has long since passed from the arena of public life.

E. A. Werner was chosen as his deputy, and he is now connected with the Georgia railroad offices in this city.

C. M. Payne was elected clerk of the superior court, and is now, and has been for many years, the trusted treasurer of Fulton county, having done as much public service as any man in Fulton county.

The first sheriff was Jonas S. Smith, who is still living in the city.

His deputy was T. J. Perkinson, father of Captain A. M. Perkinson, and both father and son served Fulton county long and well. The old gentleman has long since passed away, and Captain Perkinson is now assistant to the solicitor of the city court.

Joseph M. Meade was elected ordinary. He, too, has passed away.

Robert M. Clarke, the first treasurer, is also living in the city.

Madison L. Yeakum, the first tax receiver, disappeared from public life and removed from the city long ago.

Rev. John M. Smith, a Methodist preacher, of the old sort, was elected tax collector. He bears the distinction of having tied the nuptial knot for more loving couples than any man in his day. He has been dead many years.

James Bartlett was the first surveyor, and had his hands pretty full in those days of uncertain land lines.

The first coroner was John L. Landers. There were not so many railroad crossings and hip-pockets in those days, and his work was light.

About Bonds.

It is a strange fact that the bonds of many of the officers were fixed at much less than they now are.

The bond of the clerk of the superior court was $3,000, at which figure it remains.

The bond of the clerk of the inferior court was $3,000. The bond of the clerk of the county commissioners, the office nearest approaching that now, is $2,000.

The sheriff's bond was put away up at $20,000. Now, when half a dozen deputies are required on duty all the time, it is but $10,000.

The bond of the ordinary was $2,000 and is now but $1,000.

But the treasurer's bond has grown from $10,000 then to $100,000 now.

The tax receiver's bond was $6,000. Now, under a queer state law, it is $90,000, although he handles no funds.

The bond of the tax collector was $20,000. Now it is $75,000—$50,000 for the state and $25,000 for the county, and the collector is required to make weekly returns.

The county surveyor was required to give $5,000 bond. Now it is only $500.

The coroner's bond has never changed, $500 then and $500 now.

These facts are of interest to those who, in the rush and push of these latter days, seldom give a thought to Fulton county as it was in "ye olden time."

Hood's Sarsaparilla has the largest sale of any medicine before the public. Any honest druggist will confirm this statement.

Infancy to Old Age.

Nothing is more remarkable than the fact that a medicine which is powerful enough to cure the most horrible form of blood poisoning can be given with impunity to a little child that is ailing; and yet this is the record of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). It is a germ destroyer, a great remedial agent; it is powerful, and yet harmless; it is a medicine that contains no mineral poisons; all its results are beneficial; it is compounded from nature's own laboratory, and works on nature's lines to cure disease; it restores, revives and reinvigorates the system; it may be used as a tonic by the most delicate woman; it may be given to build up the constitution of a weak child, or it may be employed to restore to health the unhappy victim of blood poisoning. In each case it will work wonderful results.

HIS HEART TETCHED.

A Negro Convicted of Disturbing Public Worship.

One of the richest cases that ever occurred in the courthouse came up before Judge Van Epps in the city court yesterday morning.

Palmer Pease, a big buck negro was put upon trial for disturbing public worship, at Rev. Ed Smith's Baptist church some time ago.

"Well, sah, said one of the witnesses, 'hit was lack die. De pastah, he opened de do's er de church and called for mo'ners. No sooner n he did dat Mr. Pease he des slip in de back do, he did, an' he went er rackin' up ter der mo'ner's bench, kickin' an' er squealin' an' er mekin' a cur'ous fuss all de way."

"Why didn't somebody stop him?" asked Solicitor O'Bryan.

"Stop who? Stop him? W'y, dat nigger was wild; I tell yo' he was wus'n er runaway mule. Sides dat, every now'n den he'd stop an' buck, same lack one er dese ere Mountain hosses."

"Did he get to de altar?"

"Wick, him? Mr. Pease, yo' mean? You des bet yo' life he did, an' he took one er de dekins a bump in de stummick, an' sent him ter kingdom come, an' den he coteh er holt er de pastah, Bre'r Smiff, an' dey had, an' dey had, an' dey had it."

"Who got de best of it?"

"Well, hit was dis way: Bre'r Smiff, he had his eyes fix' on de altar, an' he didn't surmise nothin' 'bout Mr. Pease twell he felt sumpin' grab 'in 'roun' de hocks. Den he open 'is eyes, an' he stop sayin' 'Glory' an' an' gun to rassie wid de sperrit."

"With what sperrit?"

"Yo' knows, well, I do, w'at sperrit I's colludin' to, hit was de sperrit of Decatur street lickin'."

"Was Pease happy?"

"Happy, who, him? Um-m! W'at yo' talkin' 'bout. He was de onlies happy man in dat congregashun. He was nif' wid de sperrit, but hit was de yadder kin' er sperrit, an' him an' Bre'r Smiff, dey had it, an' dey had it, an' dey had it! He hung Bre'r Smiff ercross de altar rail, an' he held 'im down, an' de wimmen an' dey crawled under de benches, an' some un 'em shot out 'er de ch'n' an' hit de grit."

"Who got de best of the tussle?"

"Who got de best? Why, him, Mr. Pease. Bre'r Smiff warn't knowhar, an' hit tuck six men ter pull Mr. Pease off an' chuck 'im out er de window."

"How long is the church?"

"Fifty-f' foot, and Mr. Pease went de full lenk on 'is all-fours, kickin' an' squealin' an' makin' 'erous noises. I tell yo, Mr. Bryan, dat was er time, an' dat's no use in talkin'."

The witness was called down and Palmer Pease was allowed to make his statement. He is a big black fellow, unsophisticated and full of gall.

"I tell yo, judge—"

"Address your remarks to the jury, please," remarked the court, with difficulty controlling the risibilities of the situation.

"Yes, sah, I'll do dat. Well, gen'l'mens, hit was des dis way. I don't deny dat I was an unconverted sinner, an' I des sinner, an' I listened at Bre'r Davis, who preached a mighty fine sarmin'."

"A ter Bre'r Davis got frough, Bre'r Smiff, he got up, an' he 'niver heard Bre'r Smiff 'zort, er yo' had yo' 'scuse me, sho'. He's er 'zorter fow way back."

"Well, gen'l'mens, hit was des dis way. I tell yo. We'n Bre'r Smiff gun ter 'zort, dat tetch me, an' hit tetch me 'way down in de bowels er my compassion."

"If I fotch er leap, I did, an' I says ter mysef dat any man w'at kin tetch me dat way orter be reckenized."

"Des es I tell yo. I fotch er leap, an' my toe coteh on de do's, an' I des do. But de sperrit 'ab' grace was onter me, gen'l'mens, an' so he'p me I couldn't stop. I des kep' er humpin' twell I got ter Bre'r Smiff. Some fool wimmen foke w'at seed me got scart, an' dat's de onlies reason w'y dey was any commotion."

"Now, gen'l'mens uv de jury, dat's de God's t're, ef I ever I tol' it."

By this time the court and jury were thoroughly demoralized. Solicitor O'Bryan tried to speak, but every time the image of that prancing Pease, running amuck, came up before him, he had to stuff his handkerchief in his mouth to keep from being in contempt of court.

Judge Van Epps looked out of the window for a full minute before he began his charge. Finally he told the jury that the only question to determine was whether the fervor of the religious spirit or the fervency of the alcoholic spirit predominated when the prisoner was "tetched." If the former were true he was excusable, and if the latter he was clearly guilty of the charge.

After five minutes' deliberation the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and Pease was given $50 or six months.

WILSON IS FREE.

THE JURY BRINGS IN A VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY.

After a Long and Tedious Trial, the Case is Decided in Favor of the Defendant. An Able Defense Made.

Ex-Tax Collector J. M. Wilson is free. The case went to the jury just prior to the noon recess.

So soon as Judge Richard H. Clark returned from dinner the jury was ready with the verdict, which was not guilty.

Friends crowded around to congratulate Mr. Wilson on his vindication.

This case has attracted much attention throughout its trial on account of the marked ability and eloquence of the counsel on both sides. An oldtimer at the courthouse remarked at the conclusion of the case that the speeches on both sides were, as a whole, the most powerful and effective ever delivered before a Fulton county jury.

Hon. W. C. Glenn closed for the state in a telling speech, but the speech that created the most comment among those who heard the trial was the powerful plea made by Colonel P. H. Brewster in behalf of the defendant. His speech, which was in conclusion of the argument, is described as powerful and convincing. His picture of the transition of his client from wealth to poverty in order to save his bondsmen harmless, and his glowing tribute to the deathless faith and devotion of wife, children, family and friends had unfalteringly shown towards Jim Wilson, carried his hearers with a magnetic impulse irresistible in its effect. Before he concluded many of the jurymen and spectators in the courtroom restrained their emotion.

Colonel Brewster has recently moved from Newman Atlanta, becoming a member of the firm of Dorsey, Brewster & Howell. He has wonderful strength before a jury, and recovered a few years since the largest verdict ever rendered in Georgia in a personal injury case.

MARIETTA AND NORTH GEORGIA. The Petition of C. D. Phillips et al. refused by Judge Newman.

The petition of C. D. Phillips, R. F. Maddox, N. S. Hayes and Henry Wells, that they be admitted as defendants in the case of the Central Trust Company, of New York, vs the Marietta and North Georgia Railway Company, was decided yesterday by Judge Newman in the United States circuit court.

The petition was denied.

Special Master's Report. Reports of Special Master B. H. Hill were submitted yesterday in three Marietta and North Georgia railway cases. In the intervention of Samuel W. Grooms he reports a valid debt due him by the road amounting to $31,448.03, and recommends that Receiver J. B. Glover be allowed to purchase the property furnished by intervenor.

The amount due the Hawsawee company is found to be $64,533.03; and the purchase of the property is recommended.

The amount due the Jackson and Woodin Manufacturing Company, of Berwick, Pa., is found to be $25,377.18, and the purchase of the property is recommended.

Resolutions by the Grand Jury. The federal grand jury has adopted and furnished for publication the following resolutions:

UNITED STATES GRAND JURY ROOM, April 14, 1891.—Whereas, During our adjournment, the estimable wife of our worthy foreman departed this life; therefore, be it

Resolved by the United States grand jury, That we tender our sincere sympathy to Mr. Laird in the loss of his beloved wife; and we concur in the greater affliction to a husband than the dissolution of that indissoluble bond which so cheers and sustains him in his earthly pilgrimage.

Resolved, further, That the United States clerk furnish copies of the same for publication and a copy to Mr. Laird and his family.

Adopted.

JOHN A. FITZGER, Foreman Pro Tem. U. S. Grand Jury. JACOB N. ORR, SAMUEL A. MORRIS, JAMES A. CHAMBERS, E. A. ANGELL, Committee.

Real Estate Notes. Harris & Nutting closed a trade yesterday for the sale of No. 131 Pryor street, the lot fronting fifty-one feet. The price paid was $12,000.

The Atlanta Real Estate Company sold to Mrs. Linton Stephens yesterday ten acres on the Howell's mill road; also twenty-five acres near Peachtree, belonging to Judge Hopkins, Mr. Phil Harralson and Mr. E. C. Spaulding, to Dr. B. L. McIntosh; also a lot on Myrtle street to Mr. Chase; the corner of Calhoun and Eighth streets to Dr. Palmer, and the lot next to the corner to Messrs. Turner and Raymond.

The "Ouija." (Wa-ja), patented 1890. Most wonderful invention of the nineteenth century. Baltimore and all the cities of the United States are wild over it. A game and a puzzle. $500 for solution of the mystery. A mysterious parlor game. This most interesting and mysterious talking board has awakened great curiosity wherever it surpasses in its results second sight, mind reading or clairvoyance.

It consists of a small table placed upon a large board containing the alphabet and numerals. By simply resting the fingers of two persons upon the small table it moves, and to all intents and purposes becomes a living, sensible thing, giving intelligent answers to any question that can be propounded.

Wonderful as this may seem, the "Ouija" was thoroughly tested and the above facts demonstrated at the United States patent office before the patent was allowed.

Price only $1.50 and $2. You cannot make a better present than the "Ouija." For sale by John M. Miller, No. 31 Marietta street. 21

AFTER SHAVING BATHE THE FACE WITH HEALING POND'S EXTRACT.

DOES NOT SMART NOR STING. REDUCES REDNESS. CHECKS BLEEDING. JUST AS IT REDUCES ANY INFLAMMATION, IT SENDS BACK THE BLOOD WHICH THE RASPING OF THE RAZOR HAS DRAWN NEAR THE SURFACE, SO LEAVES THE FACE WHITE, SOFT AND SMOOTH, WITHOUT THE SHININESS CAUSED BY OTHER LOTIONS. FOR THIS PURPOSE FAR SUPERIOR TO BAY RUM, COLOGNE OR PERFUMED WATER. BEST BARBERS USE IT.

YOU HAVE A BOTTLE. WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT? WHEN PURCHASING, ACCEPT POND'S EXTRACT ONLY. REFUSE SUBSTITUTES, PROBABLY WORTHLESS. POND'S EXTRACT CO., NEW YORK AND LONDON.
